Product Discontinuation Notice – ADN-C Series

At Advanced Energy, we continually evaluate our product portfolio to ensure we provide the most effective and reliable solutions for our customers. From time to time, it becomes necessary to modify, replace, or discontinue certain products. These decisions are typically driven by technological advancements that enhance performance and manufacturability, or by the obsolescence and limited availability of components used in older product designs.

We would like to inform you that the ADN-C Series, including both single-phase and three-phase models, is being discontinued. These products remain available for a limited time through an End-of-Life (EOL) Last Time Buy program. Please note that no replacement products will be offered for these models.

If you have any questions or require assistance, please contact us at:

You may also reach out to your local sales representative for support.

We appreciate your continued business and thank you for your trust in Advanced Energy products.
